THE ANNEXATION OF PORT HAMILTON.

The London & China Express of April contains an article entitled "The annexation of Port Hamilton" in which the suggestion for the occupation of the islands as a British naval-station in the north China sea is attributed to the late Sir Harry Parkes, who is further credited with having reconciled the Chinese government to the annexation.

The occupation of Port Hamilton by the ships of the British squadron did not take place until April 16th; and the resolution was dictated by the necessities of a probable war with Russia We can state upon unquestionable anthority that until the ships had arrived in Port Hamilton the intention of the English government was unknown to the Queen's ministers at Peking and Tokyo; nor had they any reason to believe that such a step was in contemplation; and we have further excellent authority for assuming that no negotiations of any kind were as has been stated elsewhere, entered into with the Chineseor Korean governments prior to the actual occupation of the islands as a British naval sta-

SMART YANKEE WITCHES. TOUNG MEN DEPRIVED OF THEIR LAST EX. CUSE FOR SHUNNING THE MARBIAGE

The unusual duliness in the marriage Gh market for the past few years has been the Gl means of eliciting a great deal of interesting H information on the subject of domestic H The usual stereotyped excuse of the young men of Rochester for not marrying has been | Ki that they could not afford such an expensive | Ko luxury. As long as this reason remained Me uncontradicted the young, men remained M wretchedly happy in their, bachelorhood, but M this has all changed, now that the girls have Qu challenged its correctness.

A number of these ladies of marriageable p age and inclination have taken the " all by Pe the horns, as it were, and proposed a written | Po document giving in detail the figures to show Sa
